

already been received for the purpose. Clearing is taking place now in the grove across from Last Chance, up the road beyond Black Dwarf. Paul Williams, Al Lanier, Rags Watkins, Warren Outten, and Ralph Chernoff made the plans and drawings.

Printing

The print shop has expanded to make room for a new press from government surplus and for the growing interest in typesetting and bookmaking. The space between the woodworking shop and the print shop, used formerly for storing lumber, has been enclosed and added to the print shop. Jimmie Tite, Ann Mayer, Frank Rice, Stan Ogorzalek, and M. C. Richards are enthusiasts in printing activities.

Photography

Hazel Larsen has postponed her plan to go to California until after Christmas and will stay on here to take pictures and help with the new picture bulletin to be published as early as possible. Leo Krikorian, a new student from southern California, has done some interesting work in photography and has an exhibit in Asheville.

Production Weaving

Lore Kadden, advanced student and candidate for graduation in textile design, is doing weaving this semester for sale; she is working under the supervision of Trude Guermonprez, in charge of textile design. The former Studies Building reading room has been transformed into a show and sales-room, where woven table mats, wool and cotton fabrics for informal pieces, evening blouse material, upholstery and drapery patterns are on display.

Bolotowsky Shows

The Pinacotheca Gallery in New York presented a one-man show of Ilya Bolotowsky's paintings during November. Among them were twelve small gouaches of neo-plastic geometrical abstract style, and ten large paintings; all were done at Black Mountain College. Ilya now has a painting in the Carnegie Annual Show in Pittsburgh, and one at the Chicago Art Institute. A color reproduction appeared in the October issue of Mademoiselle's Living, and a black-and-white reproduction will appear in Les Realites Nouvelles, a book on abstract art, now being written by Max Bill in Switzerland.

New Faculty

Charles and Harriet Bloomstein arrived in late October. Charlie is a member of the faculty and will teach Principles of Accounting next semester. He is in charge of the college books and supervises the farm, store, shop and
